

RICH GIRL WANDERS STREETS TWO DAYS WITH $2 IN PURSE

Amateur Detective Found Her and Thought She Was Missing Dorothy Arnold.

TELLS STRANGE STORY.

Says Her Name Is Irma Munsell, Daughter of Albany Publisher.

Reported at first by an amateur sleuth as being the missing Dorothy Arnold, a young woman who was given shelter over the night at the Margaret Louise Home, No. 14 East Sixteenth street, developed quite a mystery of her own to-day. The authorities of the Home are investigating her remarkable story. It includes a trip in a motor boat from Florida with her father, who, she says, bade her good-by at the Battery and then turned back South again. She was left without luggage and $2 in her pocket to face New York alone.

When the girl arrived at the home last night she gave the name of Ethel Gilbert and her residence as Jacksonville, Fla. As references she gave the names of C. D. Meeks and Frank Munsell of Allentown, N. J. She had been brought to the home by Carl Rosevelt of No. 283 Broadway, who achieved fame not long ago by catching the demented girl who kidnapped Baby Ruth Fleischman.

Rosevelt says the girl accosted him in Cooper Square and asked him to direct her to an employment agency. The girl seemed to Rosevelt to resemble the picture of Dorothy Arnold. He took her around to the home and then notified the police. Lieut. Fumton, who was on duty at the police headquarters, sent two men around with pictures of the Arnold girl. They came away convinced that the stranger in the Home was not the missing heiress.

GIRL SAYS FATHER IS ALBANY PUBLISHER.

This morning the girl said that her right name was Irma Munsell, and that Frank Munsell of Allentown was her father. He is in the publishing business, she says, and has a big plant on State street in Albany. The name of the firm, she added, is Joseph Munsell & Sons.

The girl is attractive in looks and has considerable refinement of manner. She is short, with regular features, a face in which there is much pallor, and very black hair. This morning she wore a black dress, with white collar and cuffs. Her white gloves showed no stain, something strange, thought the authorities of the home, if she had been wearing them in her wanderings for two days. Pinned to the collar of her coat she wore a big artificial red rose.

This is the story the girl told to an Evening World reporter of the recent events through which she has passed:

"My father is Frank Munsell of Allentown, and during the winters he has been living at Jacksonville, Fla. I have a mother and also a step-mother, but I do not get along well with either of them. I wanted to come to New York to earn my living and my father brought me here in his motor boat—it is a cabin boat—which is named 'Big Enough.' We used to have a house-boat, but couldn't make the trip around the coast in it, so father sold it and bought the motor boat.

"It took us a month to make the trip around from Jacksonville. We stopped a lot of times along the coast to get supplies. Two days ago we reached the Battery. Father stopped there and I got off. He bade me goodbye and then started right away again. I had no clothes except what I wore and I had $2 in my pocket.

"Well, I walked around for a while, and then rode up in the subway as far as Fourteenth street. I went down to Third avenue and got a room in a hotel. The room was over a saloon. It cost me a dollar. Yesterday I had some breakfast in my room and then started out again. I had one meal, and that was enough. I walked down as far as the Salvation Army headquarters in Cooper Square and asked a man there if he could tell me where I could get employment. He told me to wait until a woman came. I went out to wait awhile and then met the young man who brought me here. He seemed very kind to me. He said that he would call here to-day and try to get me a job."

At first giving the impression that she was a stranger in the city, her knowledge of streets and localities prompted more questions and the girl declared that she knew New York well.

"Of course, I know New York," she said. "Didn't I go to school here? I went to the school at Ninety-second street and West End avenue. I lived at West Eighty-second street and also in West Eighty-fifth street. Yes, I know

Papal Delegate Tells The Evening World Church Alone Can Fight Divorce Evil

Pope's Delegate
Bonzano
Says
in First Interview

Anything That Is a Menace to the Sanctity of the Home, to Society, to Morality and Religion Can Best Be Averted by Christian Appreciation of Teachings of Catholicity.

I Am Convinced that the Catholic Church in America Is Thoroughly Alive to Whatever Difficulties Might Confront Her in the Moral and Social Order.

The Learning, Zeal and Labor of the Episcopate and Clergy of This Country Are Best Guarantees of Success.

BY MAZIE E. CLEMENS.

It was my good fortune to secure from His Excellency, Archbishop Bonzano, the new Apostolic delegate to the United States, the only expressions of opinion he has given on the subjects of socialism and divorce—subjects of great moment to the Roman Catholic Church in this country. While His Excellency did not go deeply into these matters, he expressed the opinion that adherence to the doctrines of the Church is the true remedy for the growing danger to the sanctity of the home and to religion through the divorce evil and the socialistic propaganda.

From our experience in the United States we have grown to believe that the republican form of government is the most conducive to religious freedom. Certainly the Catholic Church of America has made marvellous strides. But, Archbishop Bonzano says, out of the depths of his experience, the development of the Church does not always go hand-in-hand with the form of government prevalent in a republic.

APOSTOLIC DELEGATE YOUNG, BUT LONG PROMINENT.

The new Apostolic Delegate is a comparatively young man and looks younger than his years. Although but forty-five, his field of activities has been wide and varied. Many years he spent as a missionary in China and India. His last post before he was appointed Papal Delegate was the rectorship of the College of the Propaganda in Rome.

His Excellency received me in the reception-room of the Cardinal's residence, at Fifth street and Madison avenue. His linguistic ability is not the least of the talents possessed by Archbishop Bonzano. Not only does he speak English with but a trace of Italian accent, but he is amazingly proficient in French, German and Spanish and speaks of course, the difficult language of various Chinese provinces, as the jargon of the East Indian countries in which he has labored is familiar to him.

Some time had elapsed since his reception in New York, but the Archbishop was still enthusiastic over it. He had experienced a series of surprises from the time he had arrived at the noble entrance to New York Harbor.

OUR WONDERFUL BUILDINGS
FIRST IMPRESSED HIM.

"You want to know how I enjoyed the voyage?" he asked. "It was very rough, but I did not get any longer, though I heard there were some within sixty or seventy miles from us. My first glimpse of the city while coming up the bay made a profound impression upon me. What wonderful buildings! Your harbor is beautiful—ones of the greatest I have ever seen."

"The welcome which I received from the delegation of clergy and laity who

New York and I am too fond to be fooled by any one."

DON'T WANT TO WRITE TO HER FOLKS.

"Why don't you write to your folks?" was asked.

"Oh, I don't want to. I have two brothers and a married sister. I don't want to bother them. All I want is to be a companion to some woman. I never did any work before, although I am now twenty-four years old."

The girl said she had been born in Troy and that when her father died she would come into a good sized estate in Allentown. She did not, however, know much about the business in Allentown. She was not worried over her situation.

"I have only $2 cents left," she said.

"But if I wanted more money I could get it from a friend I have in Brooklyn."

"Oh, I met him two days ago," she said. "He is something in the Brooklyn Navy Yard."

Miss Doring, the superintendent of the home, said that in her opinion the girl is suffering from a recent illness. "She does not want to eat anything," said Miss Doring. "We will turn her over to the Chaplain's department to see what can be done with her. We will do all we can, but of course if she wants to go we have no way of detaining her."

The girl laughed when it was suggested that she might be Dorothy Arnold. "I read all about the Dorothy Arnold case," she said. "I also read about the Beattie trial, and I read lots and lots about the loss of the Titanic."

HARBURGER SUE FOR $3,500.

Sheriff Halted in Where He Had No Business to Butt, It's Alleged.

The troubles of the amiable Julius Harburger as Sheriff of New York County have just begun. A suit to recover $3,500 from him because, it is alleged, he butted in where he had no business to butt in, has just been filed in the Supreme court.

The plaintiff is the Motor Finance Company. It is alleged that Charles A. Muller, proprietor of the Picard-Picet Motor Company of No. 128 Broadway, executed and delivered a chattel mortgage on a motor car to the plaintiff in December, 1911; that the mortgage became due in February, 1912, and Muller failed to pay, but signed over a bill of sale to the Motor Finance Company for the mortgaged motor car. Now, it is claimed, Sheriff Harburger, armed with a writ of replevin, seized the motor car and turned it over to one David W. Adams, a creditor of Muller's. The plaintiff declares this was done without process of law, and asks that Muller be made to pay for the motor car, which is worth $3,500.

ARCHBISHOP BONZANO
Apostolic Delegate to the United States

forward to better emphasize what he was about to say and speaking deliberately and slowly, he stated:

Anything that is a menace to the sanctity of the home, to the constituted authority of society or to the morality and religion of a people can best be averted by a Christian appreciation of those fundamental teachings of Catholicity which make men devoted to God, loyal to their country and true to themselves.

"Do you think that the fact that China has changed her government and is now a republic will benefit the Church?" I asked him. He answered quickly.

REPUBLICANISM DOESN'T INSURE CHURCH WELFARE.

"That is hard to tell just now. It remains to be seen in the future. We know that changes in government have different effects. There is Turkey, for instance. A few years ago the Sultan declared religious liberty, and for a time all went well, but it has resulted rather differently than expected, and we see now persecution. Then, again, there is Portugal, where dissension has occurred."

"In your grand Republic, which is progressive, we see the Church flourishing, but it does not follow that all republican forms of government insure the development of the Church. But it is too early to tell just what the results, from a religious point of view, will be in the new republic of China. Time alone can tell that. But we hope for the best."

CHURCH HERE ABLE TO COPE WITH DIVORCE.

Speaking of divorce, socialism and other questions of the hour, His Excellency said:

I am convinced that the Catholic Church in America is thoroughly alive to whatever difficulties might confront her in the moral or social order in working out her mission. The learning, zeal and labor of the episcopate and clergy of this country are the best guarantees for success in this direction.

Mr. Bonzano, while talking, had been genial and smiling, but at this juncture he became very serious. Leaning

BREAKS RULE OF PARENTS TO WED MAN SHE LOVES

Netcong (N. J.) Girl and Young Man Elope, Then Keep Marriage Secret a Week.

(Special to The Evening World.)

NETCONG, N. J., May 6.—"Are married: ask forgiveness. Edna and Andy," read a telegram handed to Mr. and Mrs. John Thorp of Netcong, to-day. It was the first news they had of the marriage of their daughter, Edna, to H. A. Forde, son of former Recorder of Deeds of Netcong.

Young Forde left Netcong about a year ago, and the Thorps persuaded their daughter to break her engagement to him. Miss Thorp apparently agreed, but carried on a secret correspondence with Mr. Forde. Last week she met Forde in Newark and they went to Hoboken and were married. Mr. Forde returned home to Netcong while his bride went to the home of her cousin, Mrs. Philip Hopkins, in Newark. Last evening they met again and sent a telegram to break the news.

"My parents were very bitter against Andy, but I made up my mind to have him and he didn't want to wait," said the bride to-day. "I hope they will forgive us, but papa will be very angry."

SIRK-KOBBE MYSTERY.

Wedding Notice Causes Much Guessing
Over Names and Identities.

A wedding announcement is furnishing a mystery. It reads:

"SIRK-KOBBE—Marie L. Kobbe to Count Salzman Sirk."

There are two Marie Kobbes in New York, both well known, but neither has the initial given in the announcement. The sponsor for the notice, who described himself as G. H. Stevenson of No. 108 West Eighty-first street, is not to be found, and people who claim to know the folk of town to-day say they know of no Count Salzman Sirk.

Meantime the two Marie Kobbes are busy explaining.

MISSING VIRGINIA GIRL FOUND IN POLICE COURT.

Cousin of Late Senator Daniel Arrested for Intoxication After Dining With Young Man.

Elise Nicholas, the pretty girl of seventeen from Winchester, Va., whose cousin was the late United States Senator John W. Daniel and in whom Senator O'Gorman interested himself when she disappeared March 25 from the home of her aunt at No. 71 West One Hundred and Fifth street, appeared yesterday in the Harlem Police Court.

Policeman James Wynne, who took her to court from the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street station, said he had found her throstle late Saturday night in the hallway of No.
218 West One Hundred and Sixteenth street.

Elise at first tried to deny her identity in court. Then she said that for two years she had been in the training school for nurses in Winchester. Her parents objected to her leaving home, so she came away without their knowledge. Immediately on arrival here she visited her uncle Warwick in Maplewood. Next she visited an aunt, Mrs. Victoria Fowler, at No. 11 West Twenty-first street, from whose house she went to that of another aunt, Mrs. Morrill Calhoun, at No. 71 West
One Hundred and Fifth street.

All this time she tried in vain to obtain a place as nurse in one of the city hospitals. On her way home Saturday evening she met a young man who invited her to dinner, at which she took wine.

Magistrate Herbert sent for the girl's uncles, Mr. Calhoun and Mr. Warwick, after he had committed her to the protection officer's care. He offered to let either of them take the girl on their promise to produce her in court again tomorrow morning. Neither was willing to guarantee that he could hold her.
